HOW TO CORRECT YOUR BUSINESS CREDIT FILE

If you find that there are errors in your business credit file (and there often are), write the specifics of the error down including what entries need correction or removal. Go over your file carefully (at least two or three times). If you have questions about anything in your file, write those down as well. Once you have a full notation of the errors in the file as well as your questions, call both Equifax and D&B. Let them know you are calling to report errors in your business credit file and ask to speak specifically with a business credit file analyst. Go over each error carefully. Note which errors the credit service will correct as well as any errors that the service will not resolve or where the service requests additional information from you. Write down the responses to each error listed as well as the answers to any questions. Once the error corrections are resolved to your satisfaction, ask for a confirming letter from the credit service acknowledging the errors and acknowledging their correction. You will also want to ask for an updated copy of your BCS once it has been corrected. Note that corrections usually take at least 30 days to be noted in the credit reporting services database. Upon completion of the call with the reporting service, send a letter to the service acknowledging the results of the call and stating in writing the errors that were agreed to be corrected. Note your business credit file number on the letter as a reference. While this process is somewhat time consuming, you will want to be sure that your file is completely accurate.
